LOUISVILLE, Ky., Tuesday, June 27. The Democratic State Convention now being held at Music Hall in this city will go down into history as the longest, the hottest, and the bitterest political convention ever held in this state.

The game of politics that has been played from the start has been one of intense interest. The wire pullers behind the scenes were master hands and they made their moves with the brilliancy of expert chess-players.

The delegates composing the convention had no rights that the bosses were bound to respect and the votes they commanded were considered as commodities that could be bought and sold for certain considerations.

The representatives of each faction were in a position to trade or enter into any deal or combination with the confidence of "diverting the goods" at any time whether the delegates would let it or no.

The delegate, in fact, had no individuality. Collectively the convention consisted of three flocks of sheep. The flock led by Hardin's bell wether, another by Stone's bell wether and the last by Goebel's bell wether.

The convention met Tuesday, on Monday the delegates began to arrive and the candidates to open up headquarters at the various hotels.

On Monday night every hotel in the city was filled with guests. And, various headquarters of the candidates were filled with delegates, who were treated to free cigars, free beer and free whiskey until they became tired of smoking or were made happy by large jolly jugs.

Everybody felt that the convention would develop sensational events. The district meetings that were held at Music Hall Tuesday morning indicated the strength of the factions and when it was over it was clearly apparent that a Stone-Goebel combine had been formed to beat Hardin.

The convention was called to order at noon Tuesday by Chairman Thompson. Two candidates for temporary chairman were put up for nomination.

Secretary of the Fourth district was the Hardin candidate and Redwine, a most intense Goebel partisan was the Goebel-Stone candidate.

Chairman Thompson to facilitate the business of the convention based on the contents in the vote for temporary chairman and ruled that the delegates be allowed to vote whose credentials had been signed by the regular chairman and secretary of the mass conventions.

As a result of his decisions the Stone-Goebel candidate, Redwine, was elected over Sweeney by a very low vote, after an intensely exciting and close election.

Redwine was declared the temporary chairman and from the start he showed that he was Goebel's man for the place. He is weak, prejudiced and from the start his rulings were more arbitrary than those of any other man in the hall.

The majority report, was clearly the most outrageous case of highway robbery that has ever occurred in a convention in this state.

The politics had become as dirty and foul as could be expected of corrupt Pennsylvania.

The Hardin men realized that they were to be given no show at all. That they were to be crushed by every high-handed, unfair method that could be devised.

They became desperate and talked of revolting. Rumors of a bolt began to circulate with persistent regularity and several times it seemed that a rump convention would materialize.

The convention met several times on Wednesday and Thursday but was unable to do business on account of the delay of the report of the committee on credentials.

The chairman, Redwine, was as weak as a jelly-fish and the convention is separated at the delay of the committee and the incompetency of the chair threatened to reorganize and elect a new set of officers.

On Friday his feeling became so intense that Charlie Brown, the Senator from Fayette exclaimed, in an impassioned speech: "This convention is in the hands of political cut-throats, thieves and assassins!"

The desire to transact business became so great that it resulted in a mass meeting at Beck's hall where various speakers arranged Redwine and his bosses in the most severe and bitter terms. A resolution, was adopted calling for the chair to call the roll of names on a vote on every question that came before the convention.

Nearly all the speakers favored the abolishment of the secret ballot and a return to the viva voce vote.

At the Friday night session the county delegates had a bitter taste of Haldeman, Weaver and Goebellism. The chairman, Redwine, lasted about 200 minutes with his signature on them.

Persons who had a right to be on the stage were excluded but the tickets were given out to policemen in plain clothes to threaten and to so to speak a gang of thugs, plug uglies and cut-throats as the acrobatics of the slams of the city could produce.

These forces were supplemented by a mob of policemen and henchmen of Weaver and Haldeman, who packed the floor of the convention.

They were there to fight or vote, as their masters saw fit to dictate.

The slightest disturbance would have caused the blood-thirsty mob to have charged this convention and bloodshed would have resulted.

The delegates, on Friday night realized that the convention had been packed, that a mob had been gathered to intimidate them and that the chair, with this backing, was in a most arbitrary manner.

They became disorderly and obstructed all business and the convention, was compelled to adjourn until the next day.

On Saturday morning the committee on credentials brought in its report.

The majority report assumed a large portion of Hardin's instructed vote and as a result the minority report was defeated by the Goebel-Stone combination by a vote of 441 to 308.

About eleven o'clock or just after the adoption of the majority report, a most dramatic scene took place.

P. Watt Hardin, preceded by his manager, James B. Thompson was seen coming down the aisle in the direction of the stage.

Immediately cries of Hardin! Hardin! Hardin! came from all parts of the house until the uproar became deafening.

Hardin reached the stage and, gently waving his hand for quiet he prepared to speak.

Intense, expectant silence ensued. A pin dropping at that moment would have disturbed the house.

It was at this moment, the most sensational, the most dramatic moment of an intensely sensational and dramatic convention that P. Watt Hardin made the following speech of withdrawal.

"The hour has come when I myself must act. Realizing that the interests of the party demand an expression from me, I am here to make it. I love my state, my people, my party and my platform, and I appear before you to say that loving my party better than myself, I now withdraw from this race."

"But I have been a peculiar one. Much has been said by all sides that have been severe. I have given blows and taken them without wincing, but the time for blows has ended. I am willing for the sake of my party, to put myself at the mercy of my enemies in this fight. There is not a man in this house whose eyes I cannot look into and say that I have never done anything to him that I would not do to him myself. I waive all that is personal, and my name shall not be placed before this convention again."

"But I have one request to make of friends and foes alike, in behalf of the party and the platform and its future, do not transfer it into the hands of those who have slaughtered us before. I forgive all that is personal. My name cannot go before you, because I believe it best that it should not. I believe, however, that friend and foe alike should shake hands and say, 'We come together as true loyal Democrats, and make an organization that we can support.' Is the fight 1895 to be repeated? I say no."

"For the honor of Kentucky, for the honor of the Democratic party, let us forgive each other the honor of old Kentucky, and together give us an organization that will win for this state the best government."

W. H. Hargis said: "I saw Hardin withdraw from the race, an intensely emotional scene took place."

His peroration, who had made a fierce, desperate fight for his rubs to the front of the platform, raised their hands appealingly and with voices trembling with emotion called out: "No! No! No!"

When his speech was concluded the reports of the committee on organization and resolutions were read and adopted. Nominations were then in order.

When the Third district was called Congressman John Rhea nominated W. J. Stone for governor; Charles Wheeler seconded the nomination.

Judge Tartin then nominated Mr. Goebel. In his speech Tartin denounced the Louisville and Nashville railroad and commended the Goebel election law.

Judge Hargis created a sensation by seconding Goebel's nomination on behalf of Hardin's friends.

Brownson also seconded Goebel's nomination, saying that he would rather have a bribery politician get the nomination than a crippled democrat.

Leon Redwine, of Breathitt county, seconded the nomination of Goebel. He is a nephew of Judge Redwine.

J. N. Kelso, of Mason county, also seconded Goebel's nomination.

James Garrett, declared Adair would vote always for Hardin.

The nominations were closed and the call of counties proceeded.

Then came exciting times. The Hardin men threw their vote to Goebel until at one time he was within thirty votes of a nomination.

It was when Jefferson county was reached that the convention realized to what depths of treachery, perfidy and shame that Weaverism, Haldemanism and Goebellism could sink. The agreement had been made that Louisville should divide its vote equally between Goebel and Stone. But Les Suter, seeing a possible chance for Goebel, ignored every promise and obligation, and cast the entire number to Goebel. This on the heels of Davies county casting its entire strength to Goebel proved to the Stone men that the deal had been betrayed. John Rhea started a stampede by changing the vote of his county to Hardin. Then began a period of intense excitement.

The word was passed along the aisle and county after county cast its vote for Hardin. The latter's adherents on the floor became wild with joy. They yelled and danced like demons.

Hardin was forced back into the race. While pandemonium reigned Rhea, Ollis James, Willard Mitchell, and Sweeney mounted the platform and appealed for order. They assured the convention that if order was maintained and a ballot taken that Hardin would be nominated.

A ballot was then taken, and on recapitulation stood as follows: Stone, 588; Goebel, 323; Hardin, 361.

After this ballot, by mutual agreement the convention adjourned for the evening.

The balance of the afternoon was one of excitement at the Willard hotel. Party managers held conferences but all to no purpose.

Stone declared that he would not be fore he would listen to any overtures from the Goebel people. In the meantime he would agree to no proposition from the Hardin men and the conditions were the same at the opening of the evening session as they were in the afternoon despite the attempt of the Times to create a stampede by falsely stating that Goebel would withdraw from the race.

When the delegates gathered for the evening session they were in fine humor. The police were present to the number 150 and were prepared to do the will of their masters.

The delegates were too good natured, however, to "start anything" and between the roll calls they sang hymns and ragtime songs.

One delegate moved to a far-voted the convention to Lexington. His motion was amended by another delegate, the amendment being to the effect that the delegates be allowed to convene at the bluegrass capital by himself.

A delegate yelled: "Hurrah for Redwine!" Another improved this by proposing "Three cheers for red-eyes!"

Delicate Ruby, the backwoodsman from Washington county, made a number of speeches. An umbrella was raised over his head and a body guard fanned him vigorously while he addressed the house. He put himself in nomination for Governor and got three votes.

Ballot after ballot was taken with the same results, and about midnight a resolution was adopted to drop the hindmost candidate.

It was a Goebel resolution and the Hardin and Stone men voted against it. The resolution was lost by an overwhelming majority.

The convention adjourned until ten o'clock Monday morning.

GOOD PRICES FOR TOBACCO

Market is Beginning to Show a Great Improvement.

Prospect For a Short Crop Gives a Bullish Tendency To Prices.

The prospects are that this will be the poorest tobacco season ever known in Kentucky.

The lateness of the planting season, the unfavorable weather conditions and the ravages of worms and grasshoppers make it certain that the crop will be very short.

This prospect has stimulated the demand for the weed and prices are on the jump, with no evidence of falling off.

Several splendid sales were made last week at Louisville by local planters. Taylor, Cook & Drury, of 11 seats sold 25 hogsheads of tobacco at Louisville last week at an average of $7.00. They came home elated at the price.

Mill Miller sold three hogsheads of Burley last Thursday at $15 all round.

John Thresher of Petri, sold five hogsheads of Burley at $7.50, $8.50, $7.50, $8.50 and $7.50.

Lee Wallis sold 2 hogsheads of Burley at $6.50 and $7.50.

I was seriously afflicted with a cough for several years, and last fall had a more severe cough than ever before. I have used many remedies without receiving much relief, and being recommended to try a bottle of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy, by a friend, who, knowing me to be a poor widow, gave it to me. I tried it with the most gratifying results. The first bottle relieved me very much and the second bottle has absolutely cured me. I have not had a good health for twenty years. ## A READER OF THE NEWS

Writes An Interesting Letter From Cumberland City, Tenn.

The most remarkable and damaging hail storm passed through this section two weeks ago, that was ever known. I saw young trees as much as six inches through that had the bark fairly torn from them as though they had been shot by heavy loads of bullets. The tree tops were threshed off until they looked like they had passed through a fire. A farmer's short dance on had 75 cents of wheat as completely cut down that he could only harvest it with hogs. One old man's cabbage patch was completely destroyed. There was nothing left of the full headed cabbage but the bare stalks. I saw the end of a horse that looked as though it had been shot into with a gun loaded with gravel. The best hogs from the town is hardly acceptable by one unless they could see it as I have. Gardens are completely demolished.

Cumberland is a small town situated on the bank of the Cumberland river and the Louisville and Memphis branch of the L. & N. The great injustice that is imposed on shippers of the L. & N. is very marked where they have water competition. Most any point between here and Louisville pay as much as twice the freight rate as this point, although there are as many as 100 miles nearer. The freight rate here is from 15 to 40 cents per hundred, while I know of points that are 75 and 100 miles nearer that pay double the rate. The last pay double the rate, but it is only a case, I suppose of taking advantage of this road. The boats are delivering freight from Evansville and Nashville for 5 cents per hundred.

Since writing the above, a very heavy rain with considerable wind and the air filled with electricity passed over the town. Lightning hit a tree 75 feet from the store I am now in. From the nature of the storm, there will be some damage to report from here by.

The crops in general through western Kentucky and Tennessee are not so promising as last year owing to the backwardness in getting the crops out. Not more than half a wheat crop being harvested.

The Nichols-Shepard TRACOR ENGINE

Nothing that helps to make a perfect road and three-quarter engine has been left out or slighted in the construction of the Nichols-Shepard Tractor Engine. Everything has been done that science, skill and experience could suggest to aid in its effectiveness, power, durability and safety from explosion and fire. The boiler is of the very best selected steel, thoroughly well made and provided with every approved safety appliance. The fire-box is surrounded by water—top, bottom and sides. The draft-damper is so made that sparks and ashes can't drop out, and the smoke-stack is fitted with patent bomb-proof spark-arrester. Every part is strong, durable and is thoroughly tested.

Detailed descriptions and many illustrations of the Nichols-Shepard Tractor Engine and of the Nichols-Shepard Separator and other threshing machinery are contained in large catalogues mailed free.

The General consented, and will address the body on good roads or stock breeding.

An invitation has also been extended the Louisville Commercial Club, and Secretary V. F. Felt, says the News that there will be a good attendance of the representative business men of the Falls City.

A meeting of the citizens of Cloverport will be called in the near future and arrangements will be made to make this one of the greatest, most successful, most profitable and happy gatherings ever held in Brecklenridge county.

There is more catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease and prescribed local remedies and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven catarrh to be a constitutional disease, and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for each case it cures. Send for circulars and testimonials. Address, F. J. CHENEY & Co., Toledo, O.

Superficially by Douglas, Dr. Hall's Family Pills are the best.

Woman's Mysterious Ills.

Explanation of their nature by Dr. Hartman, who tells how to cure them.

to the Peruna Medicine Company, Columbus, O., for it is mailed free. It is a practical printed book to women. Dr. Hartman defines women's diseases as catarrh and tells how Peruna cures them.

Mrs. C. C. Neave, 116 Morrison St., Portland, Ore., writes as follows:

Peruna Medicine Co., Columbus, O.

Dear Sirs:—I began to take Peruna when I lived in Columbus, O., in 1887, and have used it and the Man's-ills ever since whenever I needed medicine.

There is nothing mysterious about the action of Peruna. It is not a "cure-all" but cures catarrh wherever located, and there may be catarrh in any organ of the body, as all are lined with mucous membrane.

Mrs. M. C. Mohl, 504 Walnut St., Columbia, Pa., says: "I have been troubled with catarrh and a soreness in my bowels for several years. I tried everything that was recommended. I tried Peruna and am happy to say that I am now entirely well."

Dr. Hartman's advice may be had without charge by any woman who will write for it. His book on Chronic Catarrh is also mailed free. It explains the danger of local treatment. All druggists sell Peruna.
